The State of Rhode Island Building Code Commission, National Grid and Northeast Energy Efficiency Partnership would like to invite you to a FREE training on the Rhode Island residential building energy code.

This training will cover the residential requirements of the current Rhode Island Building Energy Code (IECC 2009), with particular attention to the basic prescriptive option used by most builders and owners, and the understanding of several building science issues that must be considered. The training will also highlight the incremental changes over the IECC 2006, most notably envelope and duct leakage testing and high efficiency lighting.

Continuing Education Units (CEUs) will be available to AIA members through these trainings. Certificates of Completion for non-AIA members are available on request.
